Land and sea connections - thinking holistically about the ocean and land and our activities on them.

Connecting traditional knowledge and modern ways - exploring the synergy of respecting and incorporating many ways of knowing.

Improving connections between communities and ocean science - building a generation of scientists, educators, citizens and decision makers who work together to support sustainability of the ocean and coastal communities.

Connecting local actions with global engagements- utilizing the coconut wireless (local networks) to broadband (global) webs to share and collaborate on ocean education and research projects.

Continuing to build international connections and networks - building and realizing regional marine education associations and linking them internationally.
